These were mixed with a number of others and shown to Salesman Hatfield, of Revel & Co.'s, who sold the Hatfield, of Revel & Co.'s, who sold the furniture which was subsequently found in the Carlson cottage, in which Dr. Cronin was murdered. Hatfield, without hesitation, picked out Maroney's portrait as that of the man to whom he sold the furniture. The pictures were then shown to Throckmorton, the real estate agent who rented the room opposite Cronin's office. Throckmorton picked out the picture of Maroney as the man to whom he rented the room. Once more the pictures were shuffled and this time thdy were shown to Expressman Maitenson, who carted the furniture to the Carlson cottage, with the same result. Mr. Throckmorton toid of the renting of the flat at 117 Clark street by J. B. Simmons. It took ten minutes. Mr. Hatheld related all about the purchase of the furniture at Reveil & Co's. He came down in fifteen minutes. Justice Mahoney then entered the room and stayed for two hours, all the other witnesses being presently sent home. The magistrate was pressed very hard about the contract P. O. Sullivan had made with Dr. Cronin. It is reported that he was charged with having a guilty knowledge of the contract; with attempting to suppress part of the truth about the so called Washington Literary society; with being a bitter hater of the doctor, and with attempting to shield his supposed murderers. Mahoney after a long examination emerged in a very excited if not trembling and nervous condition and the grand jury adjourned until to-morrow.

Maroney uses every endeavor to create the impression that he knows more about the murder of Cronin than he is willing to tell here. The inspector, however, does not appear to place much confidence in him.

Maroney and McDonald were arraigned in the police court this afternoon and committed without bail to await requisitions. Maroney said: "I have no hesitation about going to Chicago, but if I can be permitted to prove an alibi here, I should like to do so." His lawyer interfered and stopped his talking further.

After being arrested and remanded both men talked to a reporter. McDonald said he came here from Philadelphia four years ago and had never been out of the city and has not traveled five miles on a railroad since that time. For the past thirteen months he has been employed in a black-smith shop on First avenue. Referring to the statement in a morning paper that he had been in Indiana, McDonald said that surh was not the case. He had never been in that state. The only time he had ever met Dillon was on May I last. He never said a word to Dillon about Dr. Cronin.

Maroney said he first became acquainted with Dillon in Philadelphia years ago. He believed the charge against McDonald and himself had been brought so as to make a scandal for the friends of Sullivan. He had known Dillon when he was an obscure slipper maker and had seen him go up from that until he had secured enough power to be able to order the arrest of a man in Timbuctoo or China, so long as he was a Sullivan man. Reports received from Europe are of an entirely different nature, and it appears that consumption there is now very heavy, which is a clear proof that the only thing wanted is low prices in order to greatly widen the field in which copper can be employed to advantage. Then, standing over the now dead body, he pointed his pistol downward and fired once, the ball entering the wooden bridge upon which the corpse lay. Means immediately surrendered himself to a constable, demanding the protection of the law and declaring that he had had slain Prolean in defense of his family honor. On the finding of the coroner's jury he was committed to Fairfield jail, where he now is.
